

— INTRODUCING —

LADY GREENWOOD

Lady Nell Greenwood is like Mother Earth herself, full of the beauty of nature and a beacon of love and respect for everything in the forest. From the smallest insect to the mightiest tree, Lady Greenwood knows that each and every creature and plant plays its own vital part in creating the magnificence of the forest.

In Lady Greenwood's story we follow Young Brack, an adventurous young boy who sets out in search of Lady Nell Greenwood, who he has heard is the most beautiful and wise woman in the all the land. He travels south to the forest where he has heard she lives, and here he meets many animals and insects who greet him and offer him help to find her. They reach out to him with magical moments from the forest, experiences which would bring such enjoyment if only he would just stop and look. However Young Brack, determined to find the beauty and wisdom of Nell Greenwood, turns down each offer and marches on to find her.

Eventually Young Brack, exhausted from walking for days trying to find Nell, stops and falls asleep on the forest floor. It is here that he finally gets to meet Lady Nell Greenwood in his dream, as she explains with wise words that "Beauty is everywhere you just need to look. This whole forest is the wisest and most beautiful book".

When Young Brack wakes he feels more alive than ever. He looks round the forest with fresh eyes realises that the beauty he was searching for was around him all along. He dances, whoops and leaps with joy - for this Young Brack has found the wise Nell, in the green, green woods of beautiful Bracknell.
